Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to confirm that Pierre-Simon Ntiruhungwa was invited to serve as a judge for a pitch competition at King's College London in February 2018. At the time, I was the Accelerator Manager and then Head of Ventures for King's College London, serving in that capacity from [REDACTED]. Although I am no longer with King's College London, I am happy to provide this letter to confirm Pierre-Simon's role as a judge in our competition.

King's College London is a renowned higher educational institution and has a prestigious entrepreneurial programme, based at the university's award-winning Entrepreneurship Institute, which includes various competitions and scholarships, such as the Soyoye Technology Innovation Scholarships. These events are designed to foster innovation and support emerging talents in technology and entrepreneurship. The pitch competition in question was a significant event, highlighted by substantial rewards: £20,000 for 1st place, £4,500 for 2nd and 3rd place each, and £2,000 for 4th and 5th place each.

Pierre-Simon was selected as a judge because of his extraordinary work with Founders of the Future, where he significantly contributed to supporting and guiding young entrepreneurs. His expertise and insights were highly valuable for evaluating the pitches presented by our participants, who were from a similar audience. He was among a panel of high-calibre judges, including Babatunde Soyoye of Helios Partners, Hongbin Liu, Senior Lecturer in Informatics (Robotics) at King's College London, Tom Teichman, Chairman of Spark Ventures, and Alicia Beylan, President of KCL Tech. Pierre-Simon's role involved reviewing the innovative ideas, business models, and presentation skills of the competitors, ensuring a fair and thorough assessment based on set criteria.

I attest to his significant contributions and the professional manner in which he fulfilled his duties as a judge during the competition.

Sincerely,
